Re: Coronavirus Update – Supply Elements

As it has been communicated over the last two weeks via multiple media outlets the Coronavirus outbreak has been and will continue to have many impacts across various industries. These impacts will include but not be limited to; inland transportation, shipping port congestion, airfreight availability, raw material supply chains to vendors and vendor staffing levels. In many cases the impacts will be monitored, supported or restricted by local government edicts.

We have been in contact with our key supply chain partners to understand the critical path items so that upon their respective factory start-ups, we will be able to assess how we will manage through our current planning periods. With Chinese New Year coinciding, production typically slows during this time of the year and as a result we maintain our supply chain and inventories at elevated levels. With our current inventory positions, we do not expect any supply interruptions during the next 30-60 days.

We will make every effort to ensure our supply continuity and to minimize the adverse impacts to our customers. We will provide additional communications as needed. Should you have immediate questions, please contact your Hubbell Lighting sales or customer service representative.

Your continued support and patience as we navigate through these challenges is greatly appreciated.
